This chapter provides details of the results of presidential and legislative elections that took place in 2009 in independent states, presented in circum-Mediterranean order. The list also includes referenda and those elections held in autonomous entities or in any other relevant territory that are of particular political significance.

Portugal

Legislative Elections

27 September 2009

Previous elections: 20 February 2005

Portugal has a unicameral Assembly of the Republic (Assembleia da Republica) with 230 seats. The deputies are elected through a party-list proportional representation system. Assembly members represent the entire country, rather than the constituencies in which they were elected. Governments require majority support in the Assembly in order to remain in office.

Italy

Referendum

21-22 June 2009

Under current rules, the apparentement (pre-election coalition) winning a plurality of votes automatically wins a majority of seats. This referendum concerned three questions:

Question 1: Should the majority of seats in the Chamber go to the plurality party instead of the plurality apparentement?

Question 2: Should the majority of Senate seats in each region go to the plurality party instead of the plurality apparentement?

Question 3: Should multiple candidacies be outlawed?

The turnout, however, was only 23.31% - 23.84%; way below the 50% necessary for the ballot to be valid.

Croatia

Presidential Elections

27 December 2009 and 10 January 2010

Previous elections: 25 November 2007

Since 2000 Croatia has been a parliamentary republic. The President is elected to a five-year term by an absolute majority.

Montenegro

Legislative Elections

29 March 2009

Previous elections: 10 September 2006

Montenegro has a unicameral Assembly (Skupstina) with 81 seats. The deputies are elected through a party-list proportional representation system to serve four-year terms. These elections were held following the early dissolution of Parliament on 26
January 2009. Milo Dukanovic, leader of the Coalition for a European Montenegro, secured his sixth term as Prime Minister.

Macedonia

Presidential Elections

22 March 2009 and 5 April 2009

Previous elections: 28 April 2004

The President is elected by popular vote to serve a five-year term. According to the electoral law, the president is elected if he wins by a majority in the first round, or a simple majority in the second round, in which the turnout must stand at over 40%.

Legislative Elections

Turnout: 66.19%.

Lebanon

Legislative Elections

7 June 2009

Previous elections: 19 June 2005

Lebanon has a unicameral National Assembly (Majlis al-Nuwab) with 128 seats. The deputies are elected by a plurality vote in multi-member constituencies, based both on geography and religion, to serve a four-year term. Seats are equally divided between Christian and Muslim members. The voting system is based on a majority system over one round, using the block vote (each voter may cast as many votes as the number of MPs elected from each constituency). The candidate(s) who win(s) the highest number of votes for each religious community is/are declared elected.

Albania

Legislative Elections

28 June 2009

Previous elections: 3 July 2005

Albania has a unicameral People’s Assembly (Kuvendi Popullor) with 140 seats. The deputies are elected through a party-list proportional representation system within constituencies corresponding to the 12 administrative regions. They serve a four-year term. The threshold to win parliamentary representation is 3% for political parties and 5% for pre-election coalitions within any constituency. These elections were the first to be held under the new electoral system adopted in April 2009. Previously a mixed electoral system was used, under which 100 of the 140 seats in Parliament were filled by the first-past-the-post system. Now all members are elected through proportional representation. The revised electoral system encourages small parties to run in coalitions with large parties, rather than on their own.

Serbia

Presidential Elections

20 October 2008

Previous elections: 21 April 2004

The President is elected by popular vote to serve a five-year term. According to the electoral law, the president is elected if he wins by a majority in the first round, or a simple majority in the second round, in which the turnout must stand at over 40%.

Israel
Legislative Elections

10 February 2009
Previous elections: 28 March 2006
Israel has a unicameral Parliament (Knesset) with 120 seats. The members are elected through a party-list proportional representation system to serve a four-year term.

Early elections for the Knesset were called upon the expiry of the deadline for the formation of a new coalition government, after a series of corruption scandals forced Prime Minister Ehud Olmert to resign in July 2008. The Knesset was dissolved on 10 November in view of the elections.

Tunisia
Presidential and Parliamentary Elections

25 October 2009
Previous elections: 24 October 2004
Presidential Republic with bicameral Parliament, in which the President is elected to a five-year term. The Parliament comprises the Chamber of Deputies (Majlis Al-Nuwab), with 214 seats, and the Chamber of Councillors (Majlis al-Mustasharin), with 126 seats. Despite 53 seats being occupied by the opposition in the Chamber of Deputies, the Tunisian system of civil and political rights is not considered free.
